

What Voter Fraud? Study Finds More Than 35K Incidents of ‘Double Voting’ In North Carolina In 2012

Opponents of Voter ID laws may continue to say that voter fraud is not real, or that you are more likely to be taken by a UFO than to find voter fraud, but unfortunately for them, facts don't lie.

The North Carolina Board of Elections has found that there were 35,570 instances of "double voting" in the state in 2012, according to National Review. These voters shared the same first and last names and dates of birth with people who voted in other states in the same election.

Another 765 North Carolinians shared the same names and last four digits of their Social Security number with voters elsewhere.

Additionally, at least 81 dead people voted in that election, according to election board executive director Kim Westbrook Strach.

via National Review:

While some appear to have submitted absentee ballots prior to their death, she said "there are between 40 and 50 who had died at a time that that's not possible."

The review used data from 27 other states, which included 101 million voter records. That means there are 22 states which haven't corroborated data – there are likely many more instances of double voters out there.

The anti-Voter ID crowd may charge those in favor of a nationwide law with being racist or biased against the poor. They may say that it is an attempt to suppress certain populations of the right to vote. But these reckless accusations are just a distraction from the very real, very troublesome truth of voter fraud across the country.

Die now and lets see how you vote since most voter fraud has been found to be in many Conservative & Liberal areas of the country.

Tim Tompas Tim Tompas, why does this matter what state it's in? You have no way of knowing which the person voted - Democrat or Republican. You must be a Democrat to assume you know that.

Tim Tompas - Based upon historical evidence of continuing Democratic fraud over the many years, I think it FAR likelier that these 35,000 some souls voted mostly Democratic, in spite of Romney winning in North Carolina. All it means is that Obama's people weren't as successful in affecting the outcome as they were in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Florida.

The President doesn't care how he got elected, nor does he care what happens in his administration at this point. I would say he is in damage control mode, but I really don't think it matters to him what damage he does as long as he can get away with it.

This POTUS has not cared about anything in this country for 6 years except what he could take from it and destroy from within.....Millions in Tax Payer funded vacations,throwing Tax Payer money at flawed ideas. Solar Panels, Wind mills,Obamacare, EPA regulations on saving the Planet from Global warming(while China continues to build Coal fired factories). Alienating our Allies and of course the latest debacle RELEASING 5 TERRORISTS FROM PRISON. I have said this from the very beginning THE JUST DOESNT CARE.

Obama stole the last election. The polls showed Romney winning both the EC and the popular vote on election day. The polls are never wrong in favor of the republicans and I don't believe for a second that a president who had a 45% approval rating on election day was elected for a 2nd term. If we don't get a grip on this voter fraud people will loose faith in the system and the system will collapse...not to mention the republicans will never win a major election again.

the number of people fraudulently voting is less than 1% of the us population, not enough to sway an election, ever, and half of them voted republican. the fraud goes both ways but it is tiny and insignificant. btw, i support a voter registration card with a photo on it that is free to obtain from the DMV or post office but to act like fraud is changing elections is insane. also bush had a 48% approval rating before being reelected in 2004. (his october approval rating was 48%), fraud is not the reason republicans will never win another election, its focusing on social issues when they should be focussing on economic issues. the left already won the social issue war.

Every fraudulent vote takes away a "legal" vote...and that could be my vote. Voter ID Laws...NOW!

Then you should be arrested as an accessory to voter fraud since you know that. The police are on the way.

Why would some claim that our voting system is the only thing on earth that is free from fraud? It just makes no sense and they've clearly attempted to minimize this problem. I also cannot understand why they claim that poor people have a more difficult time obtaining a legal ID. You can't work, rent, get a loan, open a bank account or write a check, buy liquor or cigarettes, fly, get a credit card, get welfare or go to school without an ID. Tell me what citizen has not done at least one of those things and it's not even a complete list. Only illegal aliens and cheaters would find the ID a problem. Also, motor voter registration needs to go. It ensures that millions of legal ballots go unused and could be filled out by any dishonest people. Over 100% of voters turned out in some areas and voted for one person. That is not possible.

Provide the poor with voter Identification. There that wasn't that hard now was it. I will gladly pay for someone else to have a voter registration card so they can't vote democratic more than once.

They don't want a voter idea law because of this kind of stuff. This was just one state. imagine how many more there truly are. In Washington state they even had convicted felons voting "from prison" to help get a "democratic" governor in office

They showed a guy on the news on election day in North Carolina. He said he had voted 5 times so far and was going to go vote some more in the polls. He died.

Proof? If it was on the news there should be video of it. Otherwise, it is just more bullshit.

If the penalty for voter fraud was death, that might change the democrat population a bit.
